ORDER "SHOOT TO KILL" IN SEARCH FOR MAD KILLER

Stalked to Darkened Home, Slew Two, and Wounded Third

ALSO KILLS HIS CAPTOR

Police Officials Think Such Is Signal of "White Slave" War

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—(INS)—With orders to "shoot to kill," police today combed the old "tenderloin" area near central city for the madened killer who stalked into a darkened house, slew two women, wounded a third, and pumped a fatal load of lead into his policeman captor.

The shooting, in the opinion of ranking police officials, signals the beginning of another "white slave" war.

The man, they believe, walked into the house either to avenge a wrong suffered in a vice war or to "shake down" the inmates.

The dead were: Patrolman Fred J. Dolan, 28, father of three children; Yetta Cooper or Cohen, 40, believed to be the proprietor of the house, and an attractive titian-haired girl of about 22, believed to be Patsy Miller, of Camden.

The wounded woman, about 28, tossed on a cot in the Hahnemann Hospital and refused to tell her name. It was believed to be Jean or Joan.

Nine suspects were arrested within a half hour after the slaying. Police obtained little information of any value from them.

Addie Davis, a young Negro maid in the house, believed to be a place of ill repute, said the killer rang the bell and was admitted through a side door last night, he apparently was acquainted with the Cooper girl, for they talked in low tones for a few minutes. Suddenly, the man whipped out two guns, and opened fire. The Cooper woman crashed through a front window, mortally wounded.

The other two victims sought refuge on the second floor. The killer had them both cornered. It was believed they had witnessed the slaying, for the man tried to kill them both.

Dashing downstairs he ran past Dolan, who with Patrolman Allen Anders were attracted to the House by the shots. Dolan trained his gun on the fugitive as he crouched in the rear yard. A shot pierced the air and Dolan fell dead, a bullet through his liver.

The old "tenderloin" was closed down tight today. Lights had begun to blink from windows there in the past few weeks. Under personal direction of Acting Superintendent of Police Joseph LeStrange, patrolmen were making a systematic search of the district.

Miss Edna L. Ingraham Is Bride of Wm. Enoch

NEWPORTVILLE, Jan. 27.—The first wedding ever solemnized in Newportville Church occurred last evening when Miss Edna Leora Ingraham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Ingraham, became the wife of William M. Enoch, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Enoch, Sr., of 4946 Duffield street, Philadelphia. The ceremony took place at eight o'clock.

The Rev. Gerard H. Snell, of the Church of the Covenant, Cincinnati, Ohio, officiated. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Mabel Wright.

The bride's attendants were: Miss Dorothy Ingraham, sister of the bride, as maid of honor; Miss Beatrice Enoch, sister of the groom, bridesmaid. Samuel Smith, Bristol, acted as best man, and Adolph Pilkington, Philadelphia, was usher. The flower girl was Jacqueline, youngest sister of the bride. She was attired in a dress of pink, and carried a basket of flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a white gown. It was made of white lace over satin, with dainty puffed sleeves. The bridal veil formed the cap-shaped head-dress, with orange blossoms on each side. She carried a bouquet of roses and carnations.

A small reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, members of the immediate families attending. After a short trip, Mr. and Mrs. Enoch will reside in Torresdale Manor.

The ferryboat, William E. Doron, is being conditioned preparatory to inspection and exhibit to prospective purchasers.

P. P. P. DOWNS "ODDIES;" "HIBOES" DEFEAT HAWKS

Paterson Continues Drive For The Second-Half Championship

TWO INTERESTING TILTS

(By T. M. Juno)

John Parelli's Paterson Parchment Paper Company basketball five continued their drive for the second half championship of the Bristol Basketball League last night by defeating the Odd Fellows, 32-22.

Led by Frank Frankovic, the Paper Makers took the lead at the outset of the game and were never headed. The winners were a bit off form compared to last week and missed many easy shots which would have mounted their score.

The "Oddies" played good ball defensively and had plenty of shots for the basket, but too many of these were of the wild variety with the result that every time a long shot was tried it fell into the hands of a Paterson player.

Frankovic was high scorer for the winning quintet with eleven points, five field goals and a foul. "Hun" Rodgers was blanked from the field by "Jim" Rubincam who besides white-washing the Paterson star, managed to hit the cords for four field goals himself.

On Monday night the Paper Mill team faces its acid test when the quintet meets the undefeated Third Ward team.

The Hibernians had no trouble in defeating the Hawks in the final set of the night. The "Hibs" were in shooting form and rolled up a 53-37 win over the Hawks. Even though they were beaten the Hawks showed the best shooting form this season.

From the beginning of the fray until the end, the "Hibs" rolled up point after point and seemed to score at will. The losers for a while kept up the pace of the Big Green but lost out in the wild rush in the last quarter.

Every one of the Hibernians with the exception of substitute Mulligan shared in the scoring orgy. "Gige" Dougherty was good for seven points. "Mike" Downs came through with twelve; "Jim" Perry accounted for twelve while Roe was high with fifteen.

The losers presented a new guard in the person of "Jim" Massilla and what a debut this had! Playing his first basketball game of the season, Massilla was watched closely but not close enough as he was credited with four of the losers' field goals. Four others went to Harry Kendig, who missed many other shots with a chance to boost his score for the season.

On Monday night the Y. M. A. team will meet the Hawks.

COMMERCIAL STUDENTS IN "IMPRESSIONS AND EXPRESSIONS" SHOW RIGHT AND WRONG WAY OF MAKING BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS; FINE SKETCH

Several Scenes Well Presented at H. S. Auditorium Under Direction of Coach Sylva Howell, with Assistance of Instructor W. E. Shank

The 11th year commercial section, taught by W. E. Shank, staged a sketch entitled, "Impressions and Expressions," at Bristol high school auditorium this morning.

This sketch was given in a brief but effective way, to show the right and wrong way of making business transactions.

The scenes included: First a young woman wishing to return a damaged coat is met by un courteous sales girls. After discussion the coat is exchanged. Several minutes elapse. Another customer enters with a similar exchange. Another sales girl comes in. She is polite and helps to the best of her knowledge, the result being she is not only pleased with her exchange but finds that courtesy pays both clerk and customer. The characters are: Clerks, Jane Walters, Elizabeth Ma-berry, Elizabeth Sugalski, Marie Craven, Elizabeth DeLuca and Ruth Collins; customers, Beverly Still and Dorothea Baur.

The second scene shows the delivery boy and the postman's calling. The impolite boy hastily throws the package into the house, making a loud noise. Switching to another house there is seen a polite delivery boy knocking on the door and hand in a package. He turns, tipping his hat, and walks down the path. Those taking part are: Ruth Collins, Victor Rockhill and Edward Jefferies. The next episode is of the "right" and "wrong" postman. The postman approaches the door and an elderly woman wishes him to take a letter which she forgot to put in the mail box. He scolds for not putting it in the right place and goes off without it, leaving the lady standing in the doorway. The next postman arrives and gladly takes the letter, stating it is always his desire to be of service to all. Melvin Cox

The sketch was coached by Sylva Howell with the assistance of Mr. Shank.

ONE BOY SENT TO JAIL; THREE TO GLEN MILLS

Result of Second Hearing of Trenton Youths at South Langhorne

CHARGES OF LARCENY

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Jan. 27.—The oldest of the quartet of boys heard here yesterday on a charge of larceny of automobiles, was sent to Doylestown jail, while the three younger ones were ordered taken to Glen Mills Reformatory.

The hearing held in the office of Justice of the Peace Joseph A. Keating involved four Trenton youths, namely: Angelo Tulle, 16, of Emory avenue; Joseph Bernhardt, 15, Cummings avenue; John Cicchetti, 15, Franklin street; and Eugene Venceller, 12, Morris avenue. Tulle was the one remanded to Doylestown jail. His case will be heard at the next term of criminal court.

The four were apprehended at South Langhorne Tuesday evening after an automobile which they admitted stealing, crashed into a tree. This car, the lads said, was the second one taken, the first having broken down on Buck Road. They are also said to have admitted to State Highway Patrolmen who investigated the case, that they robbed stores in the Chambersburg section of Trenton.

After first being taken into custody the youths were given a brief hearing and sent to the county jail. Yesterday they were brought to this borough for their second hearing.

The first car taken was said to be owned by Fred Tams, Trenton, while the second, first manned by the boys at Parkland, was that of David Snyder. When the second car crashed into a tree here Bernhardt and Tulle were slightly injured.

Rev. Howell's address was highly instructive as well as entertaining.

MOTORISTS BENEFIT BY GASOLINE PRICE CUTS

Charge of 10 Cents per Gallon at Some Stations Includes Taxes

INDEPENDENT GROUPS

Gasoline has taken a drastic drop in price at certain stations in this section. Some other dealers in Bristol report they are considering great reductions and will probably lower their charges today.

Yesterday, dealers in products of certain companies began selling gasoline at 10 cents per gallon, including tax. This charge included six cents per gallon for the product, three cents State tax, and one cent Federal tax.

Motorists, not only in Bucks County, but in Philadelphia, Delaware and Montgomery counties, are getting the benefit. The cut is made in many kinds of first-grade gasoline, the greater number selling at 10 cents, including both taxes.

The decision which fixed the new price three cents under that of the major oil companies, was made at a meeting of the Independent Oil Dealers' Association in Philadelphia.

It is expected by the smaller dealers that the major companies will meet the competition. Independents are said to be undecided as to further drops in price.

The independent organization represents over 275 dealers in the four counties. The organization is headed by William Morris, president.

Unless the major companies meet the price, their scale will be nine cents per gallon, plus four cents taxes, making it 13 cents, or three cents higher than at stations of those who have made cuts.

PENNY'S NEW IMPORTANCE

There is the "forgotten man" and also the forgotten penny, but it seems to us that whereas everybody is attending to the "forgotten man" none give a thought to the forgotten penny.

Old-timers will recall the penny as a little disk of copper, which when multiplied five times made a nickel. Free silver, inflated currency and going off the gold standard might all be excellent things in the present emergency, but it is more important than all these that the penny be declared legal tender.

Congress should think of the poor little children if of no one else. Scorned and spurned during the prosperity era, the penny is again looking like big money to young America. Who can resist pressure from this source?

One would think that the lowly copper is legal tender only for gasoline, sales and check taxes, postage stamps, safety matches, weighing machines and bargain sales.

There may have been a time when the American people refused to be bothered by such small change. Now they are bothered when they don't get it. Business looks at this vital question from the wrong angle. Instead of viewing prices in odd cents as begging pennies from their patrons, business men should think of the pennies they are saving their customers when they price goods in cents.

UNIMPORTANCE OF POLITICS

Everybody wants to believe that the turning point in the depression has been reached. The nation is eager to be convinced but only something tangible will carry conviction, so numerous have been the false promises of success.

This situation works both ways. While the public has grown skeptical the industrial, financial and political leaders and observers have grown cautious. Early in the depression they could produce prosperity predictions as readily as a magician can pull rabbits from a hat. Of late they have been loath to look into the future and hesitant about basing anything on the present.

For those reasons the recent public utterances of Col. Leonard P. Ayres, economist and banker, are of some significance. Especially important is his observation that there has been improvement in the financial and morale factors since a year ago.

His sage advice to the country is that it grapple with realities, be vigilant and cooperate to the fullest.

In decided contrast to attitude of the relief lobbies is the Ayres viewpoint. Enumerating the three factors which probably will shape the economic welfare of the nation this year, he names "financial conditions, business conditions and national morale" and does not so much as mention politics or congress.

What this country needs is some way to recognize a fool driver before the wreck.

Good times are just around the corner. The hour has arrived for spending next year's income.

If only a soft answer would turn away a book peddler.

CHAPTER FIFTY-FOUR

Wolfe woke to the sound of breaking glass. He was conscious of a thin, small voice shouting and shouting in the dim distance of a dream. Someone was shining a light upon the bedroom window, for he could see the frame outlined in shadow upon the ceiling. A strong wind was blowing gustily about the house.

Wolfe sprang out of bed, and made his way to the window, just as a second stone came crashing through the glass. A carriage lamp showed its yellow eye in the little garden below.

Wolfe threw up the window.

"All right, all right, hold on there. Who is it?"

A voice came from behind the carriage lamp.

"I guessed it were your window, sir. It be me, John Munday. The young missus has been took bad. I've brought ye a letter."

"All right; I'll be down in five minutes."

Wolfe lit a candle and dressed like a man whose house is on fire. He still was conscious of a thin, small voice calling and calling in the distance of dreams, and of the restless blustering of the west wind over Navestock town. A gust blew the candle out as he opened the front door.

"Darn the wind! Come inside, John."

"I reckoned as you wouldn't mind me using stones, seeing how the young missus be that bad—"

Wolfe had shut the door and relit the candle.

"No, you might have fired a gun in and I'd have thanked you. The letter? Hold the candle."

He untwisted the crumpled note and spread it against the wall with one sweep of the hand. A doctor receives many such messages, tragic, anguished scrawls penned anywhere, like a dispatch on a battlefield. Mary Mascall had written in pencil, but the writing was steady and showed nerve. She was a woman who could keep a clear head and remember facts that might be vital.

Wolfe crumpled the letter and thrust it into his pocket.

After a furious drive on this raw November morning, Munday's market cart brought Dr. Wolfe to Moor Farm where Mary Mascall awaited with the porch door open.

"Thank God you've come, John."

Mary Mascall had shaded the lamp in Jess's room, but even in the dim light Wolfe could see the extreme pallor of her face. She was like a figure of wax, with bloodless lips and pinched features. Her hands were moving restlessly, the white fingers plucking at the quilt.

"Is it you, John?"

Her voice was a mere whisper, and when she turned her face to him her eyes looked great black circles.

Wolfe bent over her.

"Don't talk, Jess, and don't move a finger. Keep absolutely still."

An hour passed. Mary Mascall lay back in the old walnut-wood arm-chair in the corner, her eyes closed. She had not realized how weary she was till Wolfe had come and taken some of the sharpness from her suspense. The farm-house was very still. Her eyes opened, she found Wolfe watching her.

He beckoned her to come to him. She slipped her shoes off, and moved noiselessly across the room.

Wolfe drew her very close, and spoke in a whisper.

"This is a good sleep. Her pulse has picked up just a little. Go to bed, Mother, and get some rest."

"But you? They have been working you to death. And there's tomorrow."

"I am going to sit here all night. I am not going back to Navestock till I know."

"Not even to morning, John?"

"Not for a month, if necessary. Navestock can go to the devil. Is there plenty of oil in that lamp?"

"Yes."

"Then go and get some rest."

She kissed him, and slipped silently out of the room.

Wolfe remained there through the night, sitting beside Jess's bed, his fingers resting lightly on her wrist. The faint beating of her heart measured out the night for him, the flutter of blood under the white skin. Grey-eyed dawn found him there, gaunt and stiff like a sentinel, outstaring Death, who stood at the foot of the bed and watched.

Navestock found itself suddenly in the position of a beleaguered town whose governor had disappeared in the night and left the place to confusion. A crisis creates the man who is indispensable. Navestock realized this fact directly by the indispensable strong man disappeared.

Till noon of the next day no one knew what had become of John Wolfe. He had been called out in the night, and had not returned. Even this was surmise, and the bell and knocker of the little white house at Eve's Corner were restless and importunate.

"Is Dr. Wolfe in?"

"We haven't seen him this morning."

"Surely he has not forgotten to call at Mrs. Ballard's?"

"Oh, please will you tell the doctor to come to Mr. Rotherwood's at once? There's been a change for the worse."

"I've called for Mrs. Mostyn's medicine."

"Can you tell me what time Dr. Wolfe will be home?"

The little maid grew cross and furried. Mrs. Loosely herself took charge of the front door, growing more stiff and innocent each time the knocker banged or the bell jangled.

"Dr. Wolfe must have been called out in the night. I don't know where he has gone. I have not seen him since I went to bed."

It was at Moor Farm that they found him.

But Navestock called and beckoned to a man who was both blind and deaf. All Wolfe's consciousness had withdrawn itself into that long, low upper room with its oak beams, old-rose coloured walls, and its snow maiden in the white quilted bed. Jess had awakened two hours after dawn, to find John Wolfe sitting beside her. Her shadowy eyes had smiled up at him with a look of dreamy contentment.

"Stay with me, John."

She had fallen asleep again almost instantly. No power on earth would have moved John Wolfe from Moor Farm.

Messages, letters were brought him, one full of frank entreaty from Ursula Brandon.

CHICAGO.—Trousers to match the necktie and gayly-tinted shoes are but two of the innovations America's style experts are about to decree for the well-dressed man. Previews of the new spring styles were given here to members of the National Shoe Retailers' Association in convention. The 1933 Beau Brummel will plume himself in canary trousers of shades rivaling the colors of tropical singing birds. And, if a merry young blade wishes to keep right up to the minute, he will not neglect to include the new muff coat in his wardrobe. This garment, according to Robert Sneath, Chicago fashion expert, is distinguished by its fur-trimmed pockets. Checked suits reminiscent of an earlier decade, are coming back to popularity and the turtle-neck sweaters, affected by Clark Gable, screen lover, will continue in the vogue, Sneath predicted. Some manufacturers are concentrating on footwear made of goat's leather. These shoes are calculated to be comfortable, as well as smart, since they average a pound less in weight than the shoes devised of calfskin.

When parishioners of St. John's Greek Catholic Church disagreed on the site for the new edifice, dissenters revealed plans for the construction of a $25,000 church on their favored location. The Rev. Stephen Kozak has appealed to the church's highest officials in an attempt to effect a truce.

With Matey Yalch as their president, members of 100 families are tolling with crude instruments to construct their $25,000 house of worship. All labor will be performed free of charge to keep down expenses. It has been named St. Mary's Greek Catholic Church.

"We started without a red penny, but we are bound to have our own church," Yalch explained.

MAKE BIDS NOW; NO REAL CASH ACCEPTED

First of Series to Be Held During Year Is Scheduled

PLAN IS EXPLAINED

People are urged to make bids now for merchandise which will be sold at Red Arrow Auction.

Let it be thoroughly understood that all merchandise at this auction will be sold for Red Arrow money. No actual cash will be asked for or accepted. The real value of Red Arrow money as shown on the face of each certificate is small, but its buying power is real at each auction. This is only the first of a series of auctions which will be held during the year, so that if the money is not spent at this auction it may be used at a future one.

Each person that makes a bid in any Red Arrow place bid box may credit his or her organization with ONE THOUSAND ARROWS by putting its name on the back of the bid ticket before it is put in the box. Every Red Arrow merchant has these tickets and will be glad to explain exactly how to make them out properly.

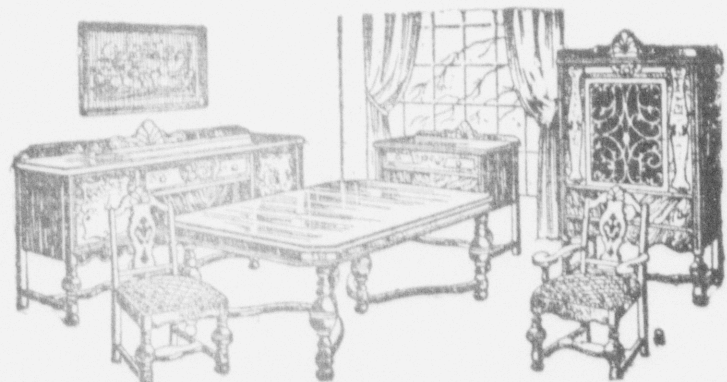

The bid does not necessarily have to be a large one and does not have to be the high or winning bid or second high for the organization to receive this credit. It must only be made out according to directions given by merchants in order that credit may be received.

Arrow checks will be made out by the secretary to cover the bid ticket credits and will be presented to the chief prospector or member of the organization that is interested at the conclusion of the first Red Arrow Auction, February 8th, at St. James' Parish House.

Everyone is urged to bid now, as the bid boxes for this auction will be closed at six o'clock on the evening of February 6th, two days before the auction. This is done so that the bids may be examined and sorted and organization credits counted. Only seven days remain in which individuals may help in this way before the first auction.

D. Preshun Murdered; Merchants Find Weapon

Mr. D. Preshun, one of the most notorious characters in the East, has been murdered.

It took the combined efforts of the Spencer boys, Marty Green, Charles Bowen, the Wetherill brothers, "Bill" Taylor, Elwood Dyer and the Moffos to run down all the clues and finally discover the weapon that was used so ruthlessly. They promise to display this to us at the Auction Sale on February 8th. We anticipate a pleasant surprise.

USHERS, SEE M. GREEN!

All the ushers who will help at the Auction are asked to see Mr. Green for final instructions.
